IF WASHINGTON WERE PRESIDENT

Descendant of the Family Tells What George Would Think and Do Today

WILLIAM L. WASHINGTON

BY WILLIAM LANIER WASHINGTON

NEW YORK, February 22.—If George Washington were president today he would look upon the disarmament conference as the greatest step toward a better civilization in the world's history.

He would see in it the beginning of a great world movement that will bring nations to a better understanding.

He would recognize a changed condition that would require a closer alliance between the United States and Great Britain, in particular, and France. This would not be a political alliance, but a defensive alliance by which these countries could stand together and protect each other and the weaker nations of the world.

If Washington were here today he would find the American woman superior to her grandmother in initiative, physical development and independent thought. He would be proud of her.

It is not generally known that George Washington held the country's record in the running broad jump. It wasn't exceeded until 1883. He was also a fine wrestler and enjoyed most every sport.

If he were here today he would undoubtedly be interested in baseball, football and other clean healthy games of the American youth.

Always abreast of the times and often a bit ahead, President Washington would have had the greatest innovations of the age in the White House.

He was the first man in the country to use the letter press, and one of the first to use a gold pen in writing. There is no doubt that he would have his home equipped with every known utility ranging from electrical household appliances to a wireless telephone.

If he were a bit younger, he probably would be an ardent aviator.

He would be a regular patron of the opera, the theatre and the better class of moving picture—and possibly an occasional visitor to the circus. In expense books rigidly kept by the president are entries for many tickets bought for the circus—usually in blocks of six. He always made sure that members of his household enjoyed themselves as well as he.

He would be the most popular man of the

BELIEVE HARDING IS OPPOSED TO BONUS LEGISLATION BEING PASSED THIS YEAR; MAY VETO THE BILL IF IT IS PASSED

Washington, D. C., February 21.—President Harding is apparently in favor of postponing soldier bonus legislation until next year, it was learned on reliable authority today. The President indicated his views to a Republican Senator who called at the White House. He indicated that if a bonus bill were passed by Congress and submitted to him he might veto the bill if protests continued to reach him.

It is reported that President Harding wants to know whether the opposition is to the bonus bill itself or only against paying the bonus by special taxes.

There was a demand from many members today that the President indicate clearly whether or not he will veto a bonus measure if it comes to him with other than the sale tax method of raising the money.

The question of financing the soldier bonus was referred back to the special tax sub-committee by the majority members of the House Ways and Means committee. The trend of thought in cloak rooms and corridors was that some sort of a manufacturers or wholesalers' tax plan would be drafted in accordance with President Harding's suggestion that the financing be done by a sales tax.

JOHNSTOWN GIRL IS NOT SO ANXIOUS TO GO INTO MOVIES

Johnstown, Pa., Feb. 20.—Just when she had within her grasp the shining opportunity dreamed of by almost every American high school girl—a chance to appear in the movies—Miss Cecelia Correll, 17-year old Johnstown girl declined the chance. The reason? Too much scandal in Hollywood.

Miss Correll, whose ambition for many years has been to some day "become a star on the silver sheet," recently won first prize in a popularity contest. She distanced a field of 73 girls by more than 24,000 votes. The reward was a free trip to Los Angeles, Hollywood, and a chance to enact a minor role in a motion picture production.

Then came the Taylor murder and the resulting tales of wild life in the coast screen colony. The result—Miss Correll resigned her place to a loser in the contest.

"My biggest desire in life," she told a Sun representative, "is to get in the movies. But I want to get in straight with a good company. I want to make good in an 'honest' way—not at all."

About twenty young people, members of two "Five hundred" clubs held a very delightful dinner and card party in the tea room at Jordan's Hotel last evening.

LEGAL PROFESSION AIMS TO IMPROVE EDUCATION AND ETHICS OF LAWYERS

Lawyers in this city and throughout Pennsylvania generally are deeply interested in the outcome of a conference called for Thursday and Friday of this week in Washington, for the purpose of formulating plans to improve legal educational standards in the United States. The sessions of the conference will be held in the auditorium of Memorial Conventional Hall. The conference has been called at the direction of The American Bar Association and will be held under the auspices of the Section of Legal Education and the Conference of Bar Association Delegates. Shippert Lewis Esq., 722 Commercial Trust

Former Director of War Risk Insurance Bureau Dies Of Heart Disease

New York, N. Y., Feb. 21.—R. G. Cholmondeley-Jones, former Director of the War Risk Insurance Bureau, died here today at the Presbyterian Hospital of heart disease. Officials of the hospital where Jones has been confined for three and one half months said that his death was attributed directly to his work at Washington in behalf of the War Risk Insurance Bureau for two years.

MOVIE MAGNATE A BLACKMAIL VICTIM, THEORY ADVANCED

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 21.—A blackmailing ring, with headquarters in New York, is suspected today of having ordered the killing of William D. Taylor. Search of Taylor's effects showed he had been almost bled "white" by blackmailers. The Cashier of the Fifth Avenue branch of the Guarantee & Trust Company, of New York, advised that Taylor deposited $7,811.52 there in the autumn of 1919. Taylor's balance in that bank is now $18.09. A search has failed to reveal any of the cancelled checks drawn on this account.

Daniel McShea, the taxi driver detained as a suspect, following discovery of bullets in his room, was released today by District Attorney Woolwine.

MOTHER AND THREE CHILDREN BURN IN SIGHT OF HUSBAND

Aiken, S. C., Feb. 21.—Trapped by flames Mrs. C. E. Montes and three of her children were burned to death in their home today before the eyes of the husband and father who made a desperate attempt to fling himself through a wall of flame to rescue them. Montes was so badly burned by his frantic attempts to pass the barrier of flames that he was taken to a hospital. The dead are Mrs. Montes, Eugene, aged 15; Clarence, aged 14; and DuBose, aged 3.

BURNS DETECTIVES ON WIRE TAPERS' TRAIL IN FLORIDA

New York, N. Y., Feb. 21.—Burns detectives and local police in a raid at Mobile, Ala., captured several of the alleged wire tappers who have been operating in Florida according to a message by Sherman Burns. The police found on the captured men cash and Liberty Bonds amounting to about $14,000, believed to have been taken from victims.

LAWRENCE TOWNSHIP RESIDENT DIES

William Owens, a respected and lifelong resident of Lawrence Township, is dead at his home on Hillsdale as the result of a stroke of apoplexy. The deceased was a son of the late Robert Owens and was about 65 years of age. He is survived by his widow and one daughter.

BEIDLEMEN REPLIES TO ATTACK MADE BY NORTH AMERICAN

"Not For Open Sunday" Says Candidate Charged With Being Choice Of Movie Crowd.

MAKES COME-BACK

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 21.—"I will not be Governor of Pennsylvania if I am elected I must declare myself for an 'open' Sunday."

This statement was made today by Lieutenant Governor Edward E. Beidleman, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor.

The Lord's Day Alliance of Pennsylvania, the object of which is the maintenance and enforcement of the present Sunday laws, gives its "heartiest endorsement" to Mr. Beidleman's candidacy for the gubernatorial nomination.

On Feb. 18, the Philadelphia North American declared that Lieutenant Governor Beidleman had entered a "deal" with the motion picture industry, through which for their support Mr. Beidleman if elected Governor would aid in breaking down the Sunday laws so as to legalize Sunday showing of moving pictures.

It was on Feb. 15, three days before this publication by the North American, that the Lord's Day Alliance gave the Lieutenant Governor its unqualified endorsement.

"The long and consistent position upon the question of Sunday legislation maintained by the Hon. Edward E. Beidleman during his term of office in the House of Representatives, the Senate and as Lieutenant Governor, leads this Alliance to give its hearty endorsement to the candidacy of Mr. Beidleman for the Governorship of our Commonwealth," wrote William D. Forney, Assistant General Secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance Headquarters for this Statewide organization are at Tenth and Chestnut Streets, Philadelphia. The General Secretary is the Reverend T. T. Mutchler, of Philadelphia, particularly well known to members and former members of the State Senate and the House.

On Feb. 18, Mr. Forney referred to the North American Article of that morning and made the following statement:

"The Lord's Day Alliance is more interested in legislation than in legislators, principles than parties, and character than candidates. It is the policy of the Alliance to support candidates who are committed to legislation that will protect the principles that have contributed to our present American character.

"This Alliance believes there is no more important legislation than that which protects the proper observance of the American Sunday. It recognizes that its chief function is to work in the interest of this particular legislation. With such convictions, the Alliance would certainly not endorse a candidate without having confidence in his position upon this important legislation.

"The Lord's Day Alliance of Pennsylvania would feel satisfied to trust the Sunday law of our State in the hands of Hon. Edward E. Beidleman

ANNOUNCE SPEAKERS FOR FISHER MEETING HERE ON THURSDAY

The local committee on the Fisher booster meeting are expecting an overflow gathering at the Driggs Theatre on Thursday afternoon judging from the reports being received from various parts of the county and should it be necessary another place will be secured for an overflow meeting.

The sub committee on speakers for the meeting announced this afternoon that the following had accepted and would handle the speaking end of the Fisher meeting: Rev. John C. Collins, Curwensville; John M. Urey Esq., Clearfield; Mr. W. B. Stephenson, Mahaffey, Pa.; Mr. William A. Mohney, of Clearfield; H. A. Moore, DuBois; Miss Vina Sweeney of DuBois. Miss Sweeney is Vice Chairman of the Republican City Committee of DuBois. It is also expected that there will be a representative of the DuBois City Trade Council.

This morning's Courier says: There is no doubt of the fact that DuBois will send out an enthusiastic crowd to the Fisher meeting to be held in Clearfield on Thursday afternoon of this week. There was a meeting yesterday afternoon of a number of people interested in the success of the affair, and plans were gone over carefully. A transportation committee was appointed, consisting of J. R. Osborn, Harry Broadbent and Lloyd C. Sheffer, and these three gentlemen will make all arrangements for the special train. It has been decided that this special train will leave DuBois at 1:15 o'clock Thursday afternoon, arriving at the county seat in plenty of time for the meeting, scheduled at 2:30 o'clock in the Driggs theatre.

PULCI MURDER CASE POSTPONED TO MAY TERM OF COURT

The Pulci murder case from DuBois which was scheduled for trial at this term of Court was continued until May term at the application of the Commonwealth yesterday afternoon. The reason for the continuance was absence of a material witness. The absent witness is one Patsy Caramella, who is unavoidably detained at Pittsburgh, where he is on business for the Jefferson County criminal court by direction of Judge Corbett, who appointed Patsy to represent him at the daily conclaves at the Allegheny workhouse for a period of three months following his plea of guilty to a boot logging charge at Brookville recently.

"I like freedom of speech," said Uncle Eben, "but I can't see no sense in any man expectin' to rest of de world to be his audience all de time."

should he be elected Governor of our Commonwealth. This confidence is based upon Mr. Beidleman's legislative record upon this important question."

"During my terms as a member of the House of Representatives and the Senate of Pennsylvania, I voted against every bill calculated to relax the Sunday laws. I am unalterably opposed to such laws. I will not be Governor of Pennsylvania if I am elected I must declare myself for an 'open' Sunday," said the Lieutenant Governor today.

RAYMOND SHOPE DETAILS STORY OF KARTHAUS BANK ROBBERY—ACCUSES TEST OF "FRAMING" ENTIRE SCHEME

Youth Now Serving Seven Years For Hold-Up Says He And Kincaid But Carried Out The Plans, Which Were Carefully Made Under The Suggestion Of Test, Who Is Cripple.

KINCAID WILL TELL STORY ON STAND

The case of Com. vs. William Fryberger, the Philipsburg young man, who is charged with being an accessory before the fact in the recent Karthaus bank robbery, was placed on trial before Judge Bell yesterday afternoon. Fryberger is being defended by A. M. Liveright, Esq., while District Attorney Arnold is conducting the prosecution. The securing of a jury occupied the major portion of the afternoon, the twelfth man having been secured just previous to adjournment for the day.

When Court opened this morning District Attorney Arnold outlined the prosecution's case to the jury in which he stated the Commonwealth expected to be able to prove the defendant was a party to the conspiracy to rob the Karthaus State bank in December last; that the plan to rob was concocted by Summerfield Test, William Fryberger, Raymond Shope and Harry Kincaid at meetings they held on Monday and Tuesday preceding the robbery, the allegation being that Test, by reason of his physical condition was unable to go along on the actual robbery and that he suggested Fryberger and the latter named Kincaid as a good man to go along; that all four met and discussed the robbery and that after its commission and Shope and Kincaid the actual robbers had divided the spoils Fryberger called at the Kincaid home where half the money was counted over in his presence, of which sum he was given a considerable amount. Fryberger, in addition to the conspiracy charge, for his participation in the planning was considered as having actually participated in the robbery and was also indicted as being an accessory after the fact by reason of his knowledge of the accomplished robbery and his receiving a part of the proceeds. Kincaid received about $3100, all but $700 of which was recovered by the authorities.

Shope On Stand
Raymond Shope, who was brought here from the penitentiary to testify and who is serving not less than seven nor more than ten years for his share in the crime, was the first witness placed upon the stand. Under the skillful direction of the District Attorney Shope detailed what he alleged were the happenings leading up to, at the time of and following the robbery. He said the robbery of the bank was first suggested to him by Test on the Monday evening preceding the affair, after he had also suggested "swiping" a "tin box" from a Philipsburg butcher. He said Test, who is a cripple, said it would be impossible for him to go along, but named Fryberger and Kincaid.

Shope never knew, as two good men for the job, that they had gone to Fryberger's home and then to see Kincaid, after which they met at the Coal Exchange at Philipsburg

On Tuesday morning when Test said he knew where they could get from $40,000 to $50,000 "easy money," and named the Karthaus bank as the place; later that day he and Kincaid went to Fryberger's home and learning he had gone to Osceola; followed him up there and getting Fryberger in the car returned toward Philipsburg and finished their plans for the robbery at a conference on Mapleton hill; the three men were to leave for Karthaus the following morning, and when they could not locate Fryberger, Shope and Kincaid made the trip and "did the job" themselves; he said both men had guns when they entered the bank, Kincaid covering Cashier Shope, whom they forced to open the gate and the safe door; then while Kincaid was gathering the cash into a chop sack he kept the Cashier covered with his gun and when all the money had been gathered up they locked Cashier Shope in the vault, jumped into their car and drove thru Kylertown and Morrisdale to the Shope home at Penelec near Philipsburg, arriving there about 12:30, where the money was divided into two shares Kincaid leaving the house with his about 3 o'clock in the afternoon; they secured something over $6000 and he hid his share in the coal house, all but about $700 of which was recovered by the authorities.

Shope stuck to his story on cross examination by Mr. Liveright and when asked if he did not have the missing $2300 "planted" where he could get it when he got out of the "pen," Shope said no, that he had hid the money in the coal house and somebody had taken all the bills, leaving the $450 in gold and silver coin found by Sheriff Gorman when Shope took him to the hiding place after his arrest at Brookville. Mr. Liveright asked Shope if he hadn't discussed the possibility of the robbery of the Karthaus Bank with several trolley passengers, between Philipsburg and Morrisdale several days before the robbery but he denied ever having done so.

OH, HORRORS!
Chicago, Ill., Feb. 21.—Cousin Emil Bruy rattled up in his Ford to call on his new relations at the home of Harold M. McCormick, but did not get past the front porch. Emil, a cousin of Max Osler, who is soon to marry the wealthy Chicago girl, a granddaughter of John D. Rockefeller, "just wanted to meet" cousin Mathilde and welcome her into the family," he said "I did not bring mamma along with me because she is tied up with the family wash." Emil said, as he flattered up to the McCormick mansion.

CURWENSVILLE

At a recent meeting of the Board of Directors of the Curwensville Public Schools, Mr. Paul Robison and Leonard Kantar, a committee from the Alumni Athletic Association, presented the following resolution, which had already been approved by the members of the Alumni Athletic Association.

Whereas, Alumni and friends of the Curwensville High School have organized the "Alumni Athletic Association" for the purpose of fostering athletics in the High School, and,

Whereas, This action will imbue the students with a higher school and community spirit thereby raising the standard of our school and community. Be it

Resolved that the Alumni Athletic Association deem it necessary to present this resolution to the Board of Directors of the Curwensville Public Schools, for the purpose of enlisting their aid in securing a teacher, who in connection with his regular scholastic requirements, is to have active football experience, enabling him to coach the football team of the Curwensville High School for the fall of Nineteen Hundred and Twenty Two, and that this organization tenders its whole-hearted support and cooperation in enabling the Board to secure such a man.

Signed
LEONARD KANTAR,
PAUL ROBISON

After presenting the resolution Mr. Robison made a short speech dwelling on the importance of athletics in scholastic activities, and how it develops the morale of the students.

Although not taking any official action, the members of the board, individually gave their moral support to the action taken by the Athletic Association, and promised to do all they possibly could to obtain better athletic facilities for the high school.

FRANCES ALDA IS CREATOR OF MUSIC AS WELL AS SINGER

Among the many interesting events with which recent seasons have been made memorable in the annals of the Metropolitan Opera Company, the production of Borodin's "Prince Igor" and Zandonar's "Paolo and Francesca" rank high.

In both of these exacting works Mme Alda, the talented soprano, who will be heard at the Drig's Theatre Monday evening next, created the leading roles.

As Princess Jaroslava in the picturesque Russian opera she delighted her audiences with the limpid purity of her voice and her great histrionic gifts. ### John E. Toot, Tailor, Died Early Yesterday; Funeral Is Tomorrow

John E. Toot, one of Clearfield's best known citizens and a lifetime resident of the town passed away at his home on Reed Street at an early hour Monday morning, of a complication of diseases after an illness of several months duration.

The deceased was a tailor by profession and had conducted a merchant tailoring establishment in Clearfield ever since completing his trade. He was associated for a time with his father and brother but for the past twenty years or more had been in business by himself. He had considerable trade in the towns in the Houtzdale region and also was well known in that section of the county. He was energetic and industrious, a loving and devoted husband and father and a good citizen.

He was about 62 years of age and is survived by his widow and two daughters, Miss Katherine E. of Clearfield and Mrs. George C. Gould, of Houtzdale. He is also survived by five brothers, Ira, Roll and Jesse, of Clearfield; Frank of DuBois and William of Bloomsburg, Pa.

The funeral will be held from his late home Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. Hauser of the Lutheran church will officiate and interment will be made in Hillcrest Cemetery.

ys Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

F.M. Edwards for 17 years treated of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to patients a prescription made of a well-known vegetable ingredients with olive oil, naming them Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will find them by their olive color. These tablets are wonder-workers on liver and bowels, which cause a nervous, carrying off the waste and noxious matter in one's system. You have a pale face, sallow look, yes, pimples, coated tongue, head-ache, listless, no-good feeling, all out of it, inactive bowels, you take one Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly time and note the pleasing results. Thousands of women and men take Edwards' Olive Tablets—the sure substitute for cod liver oil—just to keep them fit. 15c and 50c

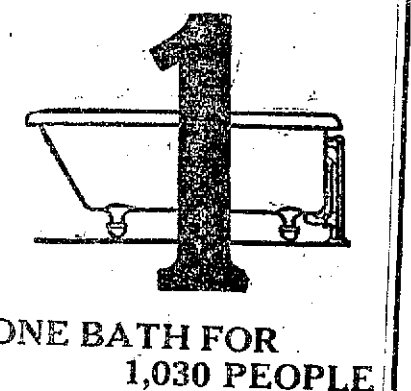

Wuerttemberg into port at New York on Sunday last six hours earlier than she was expected to arrive. The Captain wireless ahead to arrange for docking facilities and stated that at the rate of speed he was maintaining he would arrive at 12 o'clock noon, but the unseen and unknown current caught the big liner and hustled it home at an increase of half an knot per hour over the usual speed. The freak current has caused an interesting comment among seafaring men and scientists who are at a loss to explain many natural freaks or phenomena on land and sea the past season or two. The new current is chargeable by some to a change in the ocean's floor due to the earthquake recently recorded on the scientific instruments, but unexplained or never located. In speaking of the added impetus given his ship Capt. Graaf's said: "Maybe a piece of the Gulf Stream broke off and decided to strike for the United States. But in any event there it was and here we are six hours earlier than I figured."

The Cleveland Indians have been making the most of the early season of 1921 closed, is yawning and stretching while putting forth surface indications that he is about to get awake and demand some baseball for the coming summer. Isn't it about time we got something started in this neck of the woods?

For the benefit of the real bugs we will open the season here and now by giving the present locations of many of the players who showed hereabouts during last season. Joe Harris has been re-instated by Judge Landis and will be at first for the Boston Americans. Ben Shaw was turned down. Johnny Mader, the pitcher, is signed by Kenosha, Wis. Harned, who came here from Franklin, will have charge of a fast team at Harrisburg. He has with him Bill Ritter and Crossin, of the Elcos; Steve Yerks, Leo Callahan, Pearce and Tyson, of the Osceola Stealers.

We like to see genuine courage in public men, not flamboyant or stubborn display of personality, but deep-seated conviction. Our government has been injured in former years by political cowardice or down-right demagoguery. And, as it turned out, many of the apparent storm of public sentiment were merely like the traditional tempest in a teapot, perfectly harmless. A public officer, charged by the people with the duty of doing all he can to promote national prosperity, must take some risks. If he is the sort of person he ought to be, he is wiser than the majority of his constituents and it is his bounden duty to so shape his policies and his final action as to promote the general good. He must represent his people, of course, but he must do it in such a way as to win their approbation after many days.

The organ of the Protestant Episcopal Church Temperance Society suggests that "a casual reading of the New York World and other paper would leave the impression that Uncle Sam is flat on his back and that the criminal 'beotch' vendor, with his heel firmly implanted on your Uncle's neck, with sword poised in air, is looking to the populace for a sign of thumbs down, with the chance that the signal is to be thumbs down. But the publicity geniuses who are engineering this concerted newspaper attack on prohibition enforcement, have mistaken the temper of the American people. For more than forty years, the sale of diseased meat has been prohibited, but some time ago twelve New York slaughter houses were found selling diseased meat by bribing the federal inspectors. The prohibition of diseased meat does not always prohibit."

Industrious publicity by agents of Henry Ford has given the impression that the bottom would drop out of fertilizer prices if Mr. Ford secured possession of the Muscle Shoals, nitrate and power plants. The fact is, as revealed by Secretary of War Weeks, at the House hearings on the Ford offer that the amount of nitrate used annually in fertilizer in this country is between 7,000,000 and 8,000,000 tons, while the amount that can be produced at Muscle Shoals is only 200,000 tons when running at full capacity. Evidently such an additional output would have but slight effect on prices.

COOKS TO PLEASE ANY TASTE

F. G. Galpin, Historian of Texas Post, Brings Odd "Cargo" From Australia to England.

One of the few persons in the United States who can cook up a meal for a wallaby or saty, is the fastidious cook, of a wallaby, or play chef to a cockoo, is F. G. Galpin, historian of the American Legion and ex-military cook of the White Star liner. Galpin is never more at home than when he is busy engaged in brewing up a stew for a cassowary.

Upon his return from a recent trip to the land of the kangaroo, Galpin brought back a variety of oddities, including a wallaby, a cockoo, and a cassowary. He also brought back a variety of oddities, including a wallaby, a cockoo, and a cassowary.

And on the other hand, he added, "I had a couple of Australian Jews aboard and they wouldn't touch a thing the whole trip except floating island."

DOSE OF HIS OWN MEDICINE

German Submarine Commander Who Sank Lusitania Also Now at Bottom of Sea.

The commander of the German submarine that sank the Lusitania is now at the bottom of the sea according to a story which has reached American Legion headquarters. The vessel, over the side of a Portuguese war vessel, he met death with a dose of his own medicine.

The story is that the commander, fleeing from allied justice, took refuge in Paraguay, where he at once took on naturalization papers and swore allegiance to the Paraguayan republic. Friends in the shipping world secured for him the command of a Paraguayan man-of-war, the Adolpho Riquelme. He had hardly set his feet upon the decks when he was met by the rules which had been his custom. The crew, with their Latin blood could not stomach the diet as the staid Germans had done in the old days. So they passed him around for a beating and then threw him into the sea, far from sight of land.

HAD THE "THEODORA" ODOR

Fancy French Pets Saturated With Unwelcome Perfume of Marshal Foch's American Mascot.

Fifty thousand francs' worth of pet dogs were temporarily ruined by Marshal Foch's wild cat on the voyage to France. When the marshal, as guest of the American Legion, had picked up Theodora from an orphan, found he had little reckoned what devastation was in store.

Theodora was placed in the kennel room atop the liner Paris, under care of the ship's butcher, who acted as animal valet for the trip, believing that the thirty pet dogs, and poodles, and Mexican hairless cats that shared her compartment did not represent, like herself, the true red blooded pioneering spirit of America. Theodora, a queenly little cat, and exuded the aroma peculiar to wildcats. When the Paris touched the shores of France, the valet headed the pet dogs around to the group of curiously scented madonnas and was greeted with loud shrieks.

THE IMMORTAL GEORGE

If you had lived long ago and had been introduced to George Washington, you would have shaken the hands of a physical giant.

Washington stood 6 feet 2, athletic build, powerful chest. Reddish brown hair. Blue eyes. Large hands.

In history, this is important. For, without his strong and healthy body, Washington could not have stood the hardships he went through as commander-in-chief of the armies that won America its independence.

Born of planter parents considered wealthy in those days, and inheriting a landed estate, Washington was no idler. He fought his way into history by hard work. He was only 16 years old when he headed westward into the wilderness as a surveyor.

He served as surveyor for three years. The pay was small. But George was economical, saving enough from his wages to buy large tracts of land before he was of age.

At maturity, his reputation was established as a thrifty, reliable, hard worker, intensely democratic, of simple tastes, a "square deal" man. The virile pioneers accepted him naturally as their logical leader.

A leading character of critical times, Washington was serious-minded from youth. He knew the bitter hardships of winter in the unexplored wilderness, Indian fighting, and the starvation and cold of Valley Forge.

Washington never admitted that defeat was possible. In the darkest days of the Revolution, it was largely his inspiring courage that kept hope alive in his famished soldiers.

February 22nd is the 190th anniversary of his birth. It is good to know that the father of our country was regular fellow—virile, likable, an ideal American. In his life, many lessons for the young. Also, much inspiration for those emerged from youth.

WEST SIDE M. E. CHURCH

The services at the West Side M. E. church last night were of more than ordinary interest. Rev. Derris preached a very excellent sermon at the close of which 38 young folks gathered around the altar thereby expressing their desire and purpose to live the Christian life. Rev. Price was also present and gave his services.

Dr. Reeve will preach tonight. The folks from the Methodist church at the Kerr Addition, where they have just closed a wonderful revival, will be present in a body to add inspiration. Everybody is invited to be present and enjoy the services.

Rev. Price will preach Wednesday night.

COURT NOTES

Mike Chase, who hails from over DuBois way, instead of from the Clearfield Creek region, which has produced so many Chase's succeeded in beating the Woner Act to a fall in Judge Whitehead's Court Monday evening. Mike was being prosecuted by John Burnonovich for selling him some moonshine liquor, a bottle of which was in evidence. The prosecution was in the hands of L. D. McCall, Esq., while J. A. Gleason appeared for Chase.

After hearing the evidence and Judge Whitehead's charge which would lead one to believe that an expert chemist is required to qualify as a witness to the purchase of liquor in violation of the Woner Act, the jury returned a verdict of not guilty and directed the prosecution to pay one third the costs and the defendant the other two-thirds.

Ignatz Sagarillo, the Tyler man, who cut an outline of Bennett's Branch in the cheek of a countryman named Sam Pain at a party over in the Houston Township Coal town, entered a plea of guilty to a charge of aggravated assault and battery and was sentenced by Judge Bell to pay $1.00 fine and costs and serve not less than 2 1/4 nor more than 3 1/4 years in the Penitentiary.

Frank Lorangarello, who was charged with violation of the liquor law was given a nolle prosequi upon payment of the costs. Judge Bell also advised Lorangarello to keep out of the moonshine game and respect the Pennsylvania statutes generally and intimate that society in the third class city would not suffer if he would betake himself from DuBois and reside here after on the opposite side of the Jefferson County line.

Andy Kolowasky, of Grassflat was placed on trial this morning before Judge Whitehead on a charge of having embezzled funds from a lodge which he belonged to down in Coope Township. The prosecution was represented by W. C. Miller, while Walter Welch was defending Kolowasky.

"I am going to tell him frankly, exactly what you have said to me," Harriet said, presently, with decision and relief in her voice. "I shall remind him that I have always been poor, and that it is utterly impossible for me to separate the thought of him from the thought of what my life as his wife would gain."

"Be careful how you play your hand alone," the man said. "Half confidence isn't much more than none at all!"

A moment later they parted; the woman entering the house for a cup of coffee, and some conference with butler and housekeeper, and the man starting off by his early walk. But Blondin was smiling, as he went upon his way, and Harriet was white with anger and impotence.

"I'll put everything else I have in this world in the balance, Roy!" she said to herself, in the sunshiny silence of the breakfast room. "But I'll hold no more stolen conversations with you! I'll break my engagement with Ward, I'll go to Richard Carter and humiliate myself, I'll go back to Linda's house without a penny in the world—but I'll be done with you! Thank God, however the story may sound, especially with your interpretations on it, you haven't my honor in your keeping though you may seem to have!"

The house was absolutely quiet; the clock on the stairs struck a silver seven. Harriet went noiselessly to her own room; Nina was sleeping heavily. She flung off her clothes, sank into bed. And now at last sleep came, deep, delicious, satisfying.

A day or two later there was a family conference in the library, and Harriet realized more clearly than ever that it was impossible to forecast the march of events. Richard announced that after consideration he had decided that it would be wiser for the family to weather the storm of talk that would follow Isabelle's disappearance in some neighborhood less connected with her. He had therefore leased an establishment on Long Island, where the children could have their swimming and tennis, and his mother her usual nearness to town, but where they would be comparatively inaccessible to a curious press and public, and might disappear for a grateful interval. The life at Huntington would be less formal than at Crownlands, but the house he had taken was comfortable and roomy; there would be plenty of room for Nina's friends and Ward's guests.

Miss Field, Blondin and Hansen would please see to it that the move was made with all possible expedition. "I have explained to my mother and the children," he said, quietly, to Harriet, "that Mrs. Carter has asked for a divorce, which will of course be immediately arranged. Now, Miss Field, you will understand that you are in charge from now on. My mother will—well, you know how to handle her! She is old—enjoys her little bit of mischief sometimes! Anything unusual you can refer to me; I shall be there every week, anyway."

He paused and ruffled the scattered papers that were on the flat topped desk before him. Harriet watched him anxiously. She thought he looked tired and old, and his heart ached at the troubled attempt he was making to simplify the tragedy for them all. He was not handsome, she reflected, but surely there had never been keener or more pleasant gray eyes, and a mouth so strong when it was in repose, so honest when it smiled. Not like Ward's ready and incessant laughter, not like Royal Blondin's carefully calculated amusement.

Reaching this point in her thought, facing him with her whole beautiful face alive with emotion and interest, Harriet smiled herself, involuntarily and faintly. It was a smile of almost daughterly sympathy and comradeship, tenderly and innocent, and wholly irresistible.

Richard, catching the look, was perhaps unconsciously cheered by it. Even at forty-four, and under his present difficulties and misadventures, he must have been dead not to be refreshed by the vision of earnest youth and beauty that was so near him in the tempered summer light of the great library.

"Thank you!" he said, as if she had spoken. "There is one more thing, Miss Field," he added, idly rumpling his papers again, and then moving his fine hand to his thick brown hair, whose shining order he ruffled too. "About this man Blondin. Do you know anything about him?"

A more direct shot at her innermost fastnesses could hardly have been made. Robbed of breath and sense by the suddenness of it, and with dry lips, Harriet could only falter a repetition:

"Know anything about him?" "I don't know much and what I do know I don't like," Richard continued, nothing nothing amiss in her manner, but—she was so deeply shocked—soaked in what he was saying—"After a handsome fellow; he knows his subject, I guess. But I don't like him. Now, I don't know how he feels to him or she to him but as you know, she will come into her uncle's fortune in a few months, unless the trustee, who is myself, decides to defer payment for another three years. I merely want to say that it might be as well to intimate to this young fellow that there are conditions under which I would see fit to defer it, and anything that brought him into that connection would—well, would constitute one."

"I didn't know of that!" Harriet exclaimed, in such obvious relief that the man smiled involuntarily.

"Then you agree with me?" he asked, eagerly.

Here in the softer sweetness of the library, with the man she admired and respected above all other's looking to her for confidence and counsel, what could she say? Even had Royal Blondin been present, Harriet might have cast every secondary consideration to the winds as readily. As it was, she could only tell him the truth.

"Oh yes—yes: I told Ward that I would rather see Nina dead!"

"Why do you say so?" Richard asked. "Now, I'll tell you why I do," he added as Harriet was, not unnaturally, groping for definite phrases. "I've been watching this man—I had his record looked into. There's nothing extremely bad in it—he seems to be a gentleman adventurer. I don't want him mixed up with my family. I'm going to speak to Ward about it. Warn him that his sister's happiness mustn't be risked by having the fellow about at all. You're tired," said Richard, abruptly.

"Indeed I'm not!" the girl protested, with white lips.

"You don't imagine the man is serious?" Richard asked, alarmed by her manner.

"I don't know," Harriet answered at random. "They're—they're hardly known each other three weeks!"

"Ah, well! And she is only seventeen," her father said. "Discredit her, because her—she's entitled to mope a bit. Get riding horses!"

No time to think—no time to trim her course. Harriet must plunge blindly ahead now.

"Mr. Carter, would you—if you think wise—give your mother a hint of this? Madame Carter is romantic, you know."

"Oh, certainly! Certainly!" he said, approvingly. "I'll speak to her. Bye."

must keep Nina a little girl this summer. And, Miss Field—"

It was said with only a slight change in the pleasant voice. But it brought a sudden change in their relationship—a tightening of the bonds that were all Harriet's world now.

"Miss Field, I may say here and now that it is an unmixt privilege, in my estimation," Richard Carter said, simply, "that my daughter, and my son, too, for the matter of that, should have the advantage of your influence, and your example, at this time. I have never been unappreciative of the value of a simple, good, unspoiled woman in my household. I have seen the effect in a thousand ways. But at the present moment, I hardly know where I could turn without you. I can only hope that in some way the Carters may be able to repay you!"

The secretary's shining head dropped and she rested her elbow on the table, and pressed a white hand tight across her eyes for a moment of silence. When she raised him again her face was a little pale, and her magnificent eyes heavy with tears.

"I love all the Carters," she said simply. "I only wish I were—half what you say!"

And without another word she stood up, folded into a tiny oblong the paper upon which she had been making a few notes, and went slowly to the library door. More deeply stirred than she had been since the days of her passionate girlhood, she turned on the threshold for a look of farewell. But Richard Carter had left the desk, and was kneeling on one knee before his wife; he had forgotten her. Harriet went across the hall, mounted the stairs, and found her own room. She was hardly conscious of what she was doing or thinking.

"Oh, what shall I do?" she whispered. "He trusts me to protect her! Oh, why didn't I—the moment I knew that Royal was thinking of her—why didn't I go to him then and make a clean breast of it all? Now—now I've promised! And they trust me and love me—and what shall I do! Oh God," whispered Harriet, sinking on her knees beside the bed, "you know that I am good—You know that I can really help them all—can really protect the girl! You know how I have chosen what was fine and good, all these years, how I have longed for an opportunity to be useful and happy! Don't let him come into my life again, and spoil it again! Don't let Richard

The Everyday Sins.

I have heard men, in family prayer, confess their wickedness, and pray that God would forgive them, the sins that they got from Adam, but I do not know that I ever heard a father in family prayer confess that he had a bad temper. I never heard a mother confess in family prayer that she was irritable and snappish. I never heard persons bewail those sins which are the engineers and artificers of the moral condition of the family. The angels would not know what to do with a prayer that began, "Lord, Thou knowest that I am a sinner."—Henry Ward Beecher.

Her First Love Affair.

One moonlight night after attending a literary society meeting at a rural school house, a friend of mine escorted me to my home, writes a correspondent. As we stepped upon the front porch, Rover, our dog, decided the stranger did not belong there. He chased him until he jumped over the hedge. I laughed, of course. Others returning from the meeting saw the entire scene. A full account of the incident was given in the paper at the next meeting. This ended my first love affair.

Webster's Work on Dictionary.

Noah Webster began his preparation for his American dictionary of the English language in 1807 and published it in 1828. Previous to 1807 he had published a speller and "A Compendious Dictionary" both of which were probably helpful in the new undertaking. The American dictionary contained 12,000 more words and about 40,000 more definitions than had appeared in any English dictionary published before his.

SOME UNUSUAL and LITTLE KNOWN STORIES ABOUT WASHINGTON

THAT George Washington was always ready to have visitors to his Vernon home entertained—sometimes sparingly and sometimes liberally, is indicated by this letter written in 1794, by Washington while he was a way from home carrying on his duties as president:

"In a letter from Mrs. Fannie Washington she mentions that she has given out four dozen and eight bottles of wine.

"It is not my intention that it be given to everyone who may decline to take a convenience of the house in traveling. There are but three descriptions of people to whom I think it ought to be given:

"First: My particular and intimate acquaintances.

"Second: Some of the most respectable foreigners, either brought down or introduced by letter from some particular acquaintances.

"Third: To persons of some distinction, such as members of Congress, etc.

"Unless some caution of this sort governs I should be brought to an expense as improper as it would be considerable—for the duty on Madeira wine makes it one of the most expensive liquors that is now used.

"I would rather you would provide claret or other wine, on which the duty is not so high, unless it be on extraordinary occasions."

18TH CENTURY

ON Feb. 22, 1792, Congress was sitting in Philadelphia. To many came the impulse to congratulate President George Washington on his 61st birthday. Hence motion was made to adjourn for half an hour. This was bitterly opposed as smacking of idolatry and as leaning toward monarchy.

20TH CENTURY

THE whole United States, for a day honors the memory of George Washington.

THAT George Washington was bashful, as a boy, is indicated by a bit of verse which he wrote to a girl, while attending school. He expressed his feelings thus:

"Oh, ye gods, why should my poor restless heart Stand to oppose thy might and power?

In deluding sleepings let my eyelids close

That in my enraptured dreams I may In a raft lulling sleep and gentle repose, Possess those joys denied by day.

WASHINGTON attended church regularly as president, but not at all when living at Mt. Vernon.

In dying he said nothing about religion: Yet his nature was deeply reverent, as shown by things he wrote to personal friends. These were spontaneous expressions:

(1791) "The Great Ruler of events will not permit the happiness of so many millions to be destroyed."

(1784) "At disappointments and losses which are the effects of providential acts, I never repine because I am sure the Allwise disposer of events knows better than we do, what is best for us, or what we deserve."

(1798) "While I, believing that man was not designed by the Allwise Creator to live for himself alone, prepare for the worst that can happen."

THAT Washington was more human in his writings than his editors ever let it get into print is indicated by the difference in what he actually wrote at times, and what the editors changed his manuscript to read:

Washington wrote, regarding a contemplated appropriation:

"One hundred thousand dollars would be but a flea-bite." This was changed to read, "totally inadequate."

He also wrote:

"Our rascally privateersmen go on at the old rate."

"Rascally" was cut out in the printing as a word indecorous for the president to use.

QUIET SESSION OF BOROUGH COUNCIL HELD LAST NIGHT

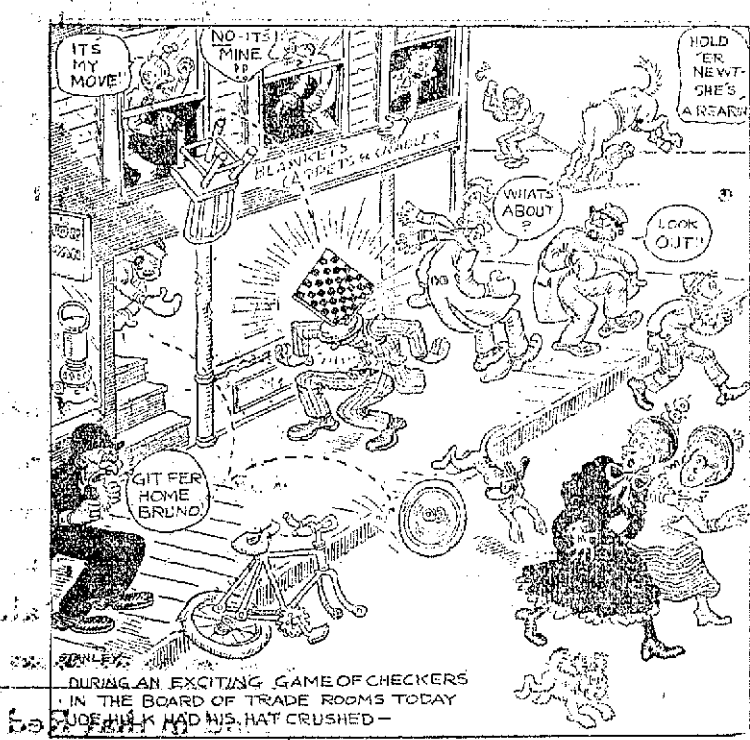

The regular semi-monthly meeting of Council held at the Borough building last evening was presided over by President Rosser and attended by Mayor Kittelberger and eight of the twelve members of Council.

There was very little business of importance to transact. The Ordinance Assessing the cost of constructing concrete curbs and gutters on South Fourth street was passed. The property owners were assessed $1.100 per front foot for this improvement.

W. C. Goss and Frank Woods were present and asked that a street light be located on West Third Avenue between West Pine and Clearfield Requests for additional hose, gum coats and other supplies needed by the Fire Department was presented and recommended by Chairman Ellis of the Property Committee, and Council unanimously decided to ask for bids for same. The annual appropriation of $100 for each of the four fire companies for 1921 was also made.

Nature Loves Bright Colors

We see the truth of this statement in the varicolored flowers, the vivid sunsets, the birds of brilliant plumage. But we never see it exemplified more attractively than in the person of a splendidly healthy woman. How does nature paint this beauty. Why in the racy cheeks, the transparent skin, the smooth red lips of such a woman and she molds it in firm flesh and rounded contours. The ailing woman is deficient in natural colorings, and she does not even appear to advantage in clothes that would set off her more attractive sister. Many women who long for glowing health, will find that they too can have these charms if they will give a trial to that remedy which brings strength to frail women—Lydia E. Proper Way to Display Flag

When the American flag is hung as a banner the union, or field of stars, should be in the upper left-hand corner. When hung with stripes perpendicular the union should be in the right-hand corner. When hung from a rope stretched from building to building across the street, on streets running north and south, the union should fly to the east, on streets running east and west, the union should fly to the north. When hung from a rope stretched from the house to a tree in the yard the union should fly toward the street.

Cornish Tin Miners

The men who work in the Cornish tin mines are a class by themselves, and all their differences are adjusted by the stannary courts, as they are called from the Latin word stannum. These curious courts have existed in their present form since the middle of the thirteenth century, and, in a simpler form, much earlier; and the miners claim to be free from all other jurisdiction, "except in matters affecting the land, life or limb."

Adam's Apple

Adam's apple is the prominence made by the thyroid cartilage on the front of the human throat. It is natural on both men and women, but is larger in men. Adam's apple, or pomum Adami, got its name from the notion that when Adam tried to swallow the forbidden fruit it stuck in his throat. The Adam's apple is an aid to the organ of speech.

Fish Swim Upside Down

The human has it on the vast majority of fishes, in that he can swim on his back. There is, however, just one member of the funny tribe that does it quite often. This is an inhabitant of tropical waters, known as the globe fish. The skull in the underside of this fish is loose and can be tilted with air at will. When the fish blows itself out in this manner, it naturally turns on its back and goes off its way in that position.

The Truth About Washington and His Hatchet

BY WILLIAM E. BARTON

That George Washington hatchet story has become a joke. One rarely hears it referred to except in terms of hilarity. But it is one of very few stories that have come down to us concerning the youth of George Washington and it is not in all respects unworthy either of credence or respect. The original little hatchet story comes to us from the pen of Mason L. Weems, a friend of Washington and for a time rector of Pohick church where Washington attended. He wrote several books, the most famous of which is his "Life of Washington." The first edition was a pamphlet of 82 pages which appeared in 1800, very shortly after the death of Washington. It grew into a sizable little book of 244 pages. It ran through 40 or more editions.

Lee Praises Book

Weems was not only the friend of the Washington family, but also of the Lees and other noted Virginia people. The title page of his book bears this testimony from General Lee: "Light Horse Harry" of the Revolutionary Army, the intimate friend of Washington:

"The author has treated this great subject with admirable success in a new way. He turns all the actions of Washington to the encouragement of virtue, by a careful application of numerous exemplifications drawn from the conduct of the founder of our republic from his early life."

That is to say that General Lee and other intimate friends of Washington admired this stilted old biography for the very qualities that have caused us to ridicule it.

It is interesting to peruse the story of the little hatchet precisely as Parson Weems wrote it. Having related how the father of George was very careful to train him in habits of truthfulness, with classic parallel references to Ulysses and Telemachus, he says:

Sowing Good Seed

"This, you'll say, was sowing good seed!—Yes, it was; and the crop, thank God, was as I believe it ever will be, where a man acts the true part, that is, the guardian angel of his child."

The following anecdote is a case in point. It is too valuable to be lost, and too true to be doubted; for it was communicated to me by the same excellent lady to whom I am indebted for the last.

"When George", said she, "was about six years old, he was made the wealthy master, of a hatchet, of which like most little boys, he was immoderately fond, and was constantly going about chopping everything that came in his way.

"One day in the garden, where he often amused himself hacking his mother's pea-sticks, he unluckily tried the edge of his hatchet on the body of a beautiful young English cherry tree, which he barked so terribly I don't believe the tree ever got the better of it. The next morning, the old gentleman, finding out what had befallen his tree, which, by the way, was a great favorite, came into the house and with much warmth asked for the mischievous author, declaring at the same time, that he would not have taken five guineas for it."

A Tough Question

"Presently George and his hatchet made their appearance. 'George', said his father, 'do you know who killed that beautiful little cherry tree yonder in the garden?'"

"This was a tough question; and George staggered under it for a moment; but quickly recovered himself; and looking at his father with the sweet face of youth, brightened with the inexpressible charm of all-conquering truth, he bravely cried out—'I can't tell a lie, pa; you know I can't tell a lie. I did cut it with my hatchet.'"

"Run to my arms, you dearest boy," cried his father in transports, 'run to my arms, glad am I, George, that you killed my tree; for you have paid me a thousand fold. Such an act of heroism in my son is worth more than a thousand trees, though blossomed with silver, and their fruits of purest gold.'"

Parson Weems obtained this story from an old lady whose lifelong acquaintance with Washington gave her access to facts of his early life, and whose reputation for truthfulness was unchallenged.

Rested on Fact

Weems did not invent the story, and neither did his informant. The story rested on some basis of fact. It is not likely that it came down without exaggeration, but when you have made all possible deduction, what have you left? A father, training his boy to be truthful, and the boy, having done a wrong act and being tempted to seek refuge in falsehood, bravely telling the truth and his father commending his truthfulness instead of punishing the boy.

So, after we have had our little laugh at Parson Weems and his highly colored narrative, I am still disposed to say that the little hatchet story is still a good one to tell to American boys.

Attorney A. R. Chase Commercial Club Guest At Meeting Last Night

A regular meeting of the Commercial Club was held at The Jordan Hotel last evening and as is the usual way of those Commercialities they were right there at the tap of the bell to join in the business of the club and the accompanying festivities of the occasion. Very little business was on the boards as the new administration has everything running so smoothly that nearly all of the allotted time can be given over to the speaker of the evening and lunch. Attorney W. Elbridge Brown, one of the new members present, made his debut before the club by disclaiming the statement that he was an orator but here was a case where, as lawyers sometimes do, the defense convicted. Cortes Bell, Esq., also responded with a happy little story. President Warner also was successful drawing a few remarks from Hon. Harry Boulton, one of the invited guests.

Many new features have been introduced into the club, one which is popular is a drawing each evening for a membership prize. The lucky fellow one week must provide the prize for the next week. In this instance Mr. Gosman of the Penn Public must come across at next meeting. Last evening he drew a handsome fountain pen from Dr. L. F. Stewart, who was the victim the last meeting.

The speaker of the evening was Attorney A. R. Chase who spoke about "ten minutes" and a little longer; and about some other things as well. Mr. Chase discussed some legal questions which confronted the man in business and injected considerable humor into his talk. The evening was a thoroughly enjoyable one. Five new members were voted in which once more fills the membership roll up to the number permitted under the by laws which is seventy-five.

DOINGS OF THE DUFFS

TOM MIX, DUBOIS MOVIE STAR A DADDY

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Mix of the East Side, received an announcement yesterday that pleased them highly. It read as follows: "Just arrived. One Helluva good cowgirl. Thomasine Mix. At home on rainy days." The announcement is from their son, Tom Mix, the noted Fox star, and heralds the first arrival in that family. The grandparents are exceptionally happy over the fact and are eagerly awaiting a visit from their noted son and his family. It is possible that Tom will be home some day to renew old friendships in this city.

"Old Noll"

"Old Noll" was a term of contempt applied to Oliver Cromwell by his contemporaries. "Nay, Old Noll, whose bones were dug up and hung in chains here at home, has not he, too, got to be a very respectable grim bronze figure, of whom England seems proud rather than otherwise?"—Thomas Carlyle.

A birthday party in honor of little Miss Avonell Hall is being held this afternoon.

Legal Profession Aims To Improve Education And Ethics Of Lawyer

Building, Philadelphia, is secretary of the joint committee.

Considerable interest is centered in a topic to be introduced by Dr. William Draper Lewis, former Dean of the law school of the University of Pennsylvania. Dr. Lewis's subject will be "A method of bringing law school students in touch with practicing lawyers of high professional ideals."

Delegates from the Pennsylvania Bar Association including Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Robert von Moschleskor, of Philadelphia; Thomas Patterson of Pittsburgh; chairman of the Board of Law Examiners of Pennsylvania; Colonel A. M. Holding, of West Chester, president of the Pennsylvania Bar Association, and Harold B. Butler, of Philadelphia, secretary of the Association, will be present. Delegates also will be in attendance from fifteen county bar associations throughout the state.

A newer and better ideal of legal education and a stronger realization of the profession's duty to the public, is expected to result from the conference, according to Mr. Lewis secretary of the joint committee in charge.

The various sessions will be presided over by Senator Elihu Root; the Hon. Clarence N. Goodwin, chairman of the Conference of Bar Associations; Chief Justice William H. Taft, of the Supreme Court of the United States; former Attorney General of Pennsylvania Hampton L. Carson; former Ambassador John V. Davis; and the Hon. William G. McArdle.

United States Senator George Wharton Pepper will be a speaker at the banquet that concludes the conference. Other speakers will be United States Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, and former Solicitor General of the United States William L. Frierson. The President and Mrs. Harding will receive the delegates at the White House in the afternoon preceding the banquet.

The standards of legal education fixed by The American Bar Association, and which will be discussed at the conference, provided that every candidate for admission to the bar shall give evidence of graduation from a law school complying with the following standards:

1. Two years of study in a college, as a condition of admission.
2. Students to pursue a course of three years duration if they devote substantially all of their working time to their studies, and a lower course, equivalent in the number of working hours, if they devote only part time to their studies.

3. It shall provide an adequate library for the use of students.
4. It shall have among its teachers a sufficient number giving their entire time to the school to insure actual personal acquaintance and influence with the whole student body.

In addition to the delegates from Pennsylvania, representatives of bar associations in forty-five other states and from numerous county bar associations in other states, also will be present.

JORDAN'S

Gland Tragedy

Irwin Bacon, 58, who became nationally known several months ago as the subject of a monkey gland operation, is missing from his home at Atlantic City. Physicians and psychologists are deeply interested in his disappearance. Police think he may have become despondent because results of the operation did not meet his expectations. Bacon left a note to his wife (below). She and their daughter, Genevieve, 17 (above), believe he may have ended his life.

DOES IT CATCH YOU
—right in the back?

It may be that you are mysteriously attacked by pain in back, (lumbago), or limbs, "neuralgic" pains—shooting anywhere. Backache of any kind is often caused by kidney disorder, which means that the kidneys are not working properly. Poisonous matter and uric acid accumulate within the body in great abundance, overworking the sick kidneys. Perhaps you have become nervous, despondent, sick, feverish, irritable, have spots appearing before the eyes, bags under the lids, and lack ambition to do things. The latest and most effective means of overcoming such trouble, is to drink plenty of water between meals, and take a single An-uric (ant-uric) Tablet before each meal for a while, or until recovered.

Simply ask your favorite druggist for Doctor Pierce's Anuric Tablets (kidney and backache remedy).

Send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce's Invalids Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for trial package. Many folks in town as elsewhere in this State have been benefited as was Mr. Wilson.

Birdsford, Pa.—"For ten years I suffered with kidney and bladder ailments, my kidneys were congested and inactive causing me to have severe lumbago pains through the back and hips. I also had what the doctors called uric acid poisoning and I would have headaches and spells that would last for a week at a time. I took three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets and was completely cured. I have not had another attack." T. R. Wilson of York St.

Fruits in Powder.
It would be very convenient to keep in the family fruit juices in the form of dry powders, so that one could mix a glass of lemonade or orangeade or other beverage offhand. They would be useful, also, for cooking. A newly patented process for making such powders consists in mixing the fruit juice with gelatinized starch and reducing the solution to a dry product by atomizing it into a current of dry, warm air.

Lightning Strokes.

With regard to the voltage of lightning strokes there are only estimates. These range from a few hundred thousand to several billion volts, depending upon the ideas of the persons making the estimates. No measurements have been made. The impedance of lightning strokes is not definitely known. A few attempts having been made to measure it. The best measurements of this kind show that the current intensity may be as great as 25,000 amperes. As for harnessing lightning and turning it into energy useful to man, no practicable scheme has yet been presented.
